The Level Editor

Where to start? The Distance Level Editor could probably have its own small book dedicated to all the features and how it evolved over the years. This feature, paired with the accessibility of Steam Workshop integration allows the game's user base to expand upon the levels and assets that we have in the game. As of this sentence there are over 2,500 user created levels on Steam increasing the longevity of playtime in Distance by multitudes.

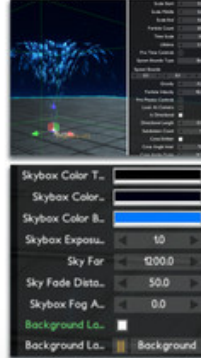

Aside from gushing about the amazing community that was formed in no small part of having a public level editor in both Distance and Nitronic Rush, the development of the editor has been an ongoing process throughout the years. Many of the updates in Early Access were focused on new features added to the level editor. One of the very first quality of life improvements was the track editing system. Having a spline road to manipulate dynamically helped fuel the creativity and design process. Later, objects could be aligned and attached to the track. Other notable improvements are layers, golden simples, a particle system, flexible fog, skyboxes, an expansive animator and cinematic tools.

Testing for Trackography which utilizes the spline roads to create randomized levels from keywords or 'seeds'

3D premade tracks for Survive The Editor (v 6.2) a contest run by Refract that challenges the community to create themed levels
